The family is the "natural and fundamental" building block of society (UDHR Art. 16(3)). As such, stable families are essential for stable communities, stable nations, and a stable world. This is evidenced in myriad studies and statistics. Positive trends of strong families include decreases in poverty and teenage pregnancy, and increases in physical and mental health, educational opportunities, employment and earning potential, and self-reliance. This event will seek to show some of the ways in which strong families aid in elevating the next generation, with speakers highlighting demographic trends, the family and health, the family and humanitarian aid, and the family and education.

Co-sponsored by The Permanent Missions of The Gambia and the Democratic Republic of Congo to the United Nations, Geneva and Latter-day Saint Charities.
