VIII. SUGGESTED ACTIVITIES

Often referred to as Genève in French, the Swiss city of Geneva is the country's third-biggest city and offers a definite international flavor. The city enjoys a superb location next to Lake Geneva, which is known locally in Switzerland as Lac Léman and is where you will find the breathtaking Jet d'Eau fountain, which is actually the tallest fountain on the planet and often sprays a gentle mist towards onlookers, although if the wind changes, be prepared to get soaked. Geneva is the official home of the European Headquarters of the United Nations, along with more than 200 other important international organizations. Overflowing with museums, Geneva is a true city of culture and features an extensive calendar of events and an exciting nightlife, particularly around the banks of the River Rhône.

Please refer to the attached documents for suggestions on meals, drinks, bars and cafés as well as some general information on gastronomy and events in Geneva.

Some of the main tourist attractions are:

- Geneva's lakefront
- Jet d'eau (water fountain)
- Flower Clock
- Saint Peter's Cathedral
- Reformation Wall
- Place Neuve
- United Nations Building
- Place du Bourg-de-Four

Visiting the archaeological site of Saint-Pierre Cathedral offers a unique experience, an underground journey through an exceptional site, at the top of the hill, in the heart of Geneva's old town.

One of the most significant sites of its kind north of the Alps, it is presented in several specially equipped spaces within the excavations, using cutting-edge museum technologies. The visit thus begins in the 3rd-century BC and leads up to the construction of the current cathedral in the 12th century.

The space under Saint-Pierre Cathedral contains the remains of the many churches that preceded the current structure: the oldest of these dates from the late 4th century, providing evidence of Geneva's pivotal role in the development of Christianity. Furthermore, the excavations have brought to light traces of pre-Christian occupation of the hill: wells, a grain processing area, a likely ceremonial building and an Allobrogian tomb.

Although the site was occupied continuously, traces of ancient Geneva can be easily discerned. The bishops of Geneva, who inherited many of the powers of the Roman civilian and military rulers, chose this same location to erect several places of worship dedicated to preaching, baptism, the memory of the deceased and teaching.

The spirit of naturalism that prevailed in the 18th century eventually prompted A.-P. de Candolle to establish Geneva's first extensive botanical gardens in the present Bastions Park in 1817. Today this area of 28 hectares, situated since 1904 on the edge of Geneva, is an ideal setting for either a simple stroll or for learning. The Botanical Gardens consist of a collection of 16,000 plant species from all over the world. This truly living museum is divided into several sections: an arboretum, the rock garden and banks of protected plants, medicinal and useful plants, greenhouses, horticultural plants (including a "garden of scent and touch"), an animal park devoted to conservation and "Botanicum" (a family space) near the lake. The Conservatory owns a rich public scientific library of more than 220,000 volumes and a herbarium whose more than 5,5 million samples make it one of the five largest in the world (visit by appointment).

Coppet Castle (near Geneva)

Tel. +41 (0)22 776 10 28

Web: www.chateaucoppet.ch

The Castle of Coppet was reconstructed at the end of the 17th century upon the ruins of a 13th century fortified castle, some remains of which may still be seen. The castle lies in a vast park overlooking the Lake of Geneva. It tells the story of a family: that of the Swiss Jacques Necker, Finance Minister to Louis XVI, and of his daughter, Mme de Staël, who went into exile there due to her opposition to Napoleon. She initiated the "Salon de l'Europe" where prominent figures of the day debated on the arts, literature and politics. Since Necker's time, the castle has remained in the hands of his descendants. This explains the home-like atmosphere of the museum which displays superb furniture, paintings and objects in their original setting.

Easter-October: Daily: 2pm-6pm

Closed from November to Easter.

CHF 9.- Adults, CHF 7.- Students.

Shopping

Although the Rue de la Confederation is an excellent place to begin your shopping trip, nearby there are also many excellent streets and public squares all over central Geneva, such as the Rive Droite, Rue du Mont Blanc, the Place du Molard, the Rue du Marche and the Rue du Rhône. These areas are rather upmarket and expensive, and so are perfect for a spot of serious window shopping, although they are also home to a number of good supermarkets.

The Rue du Mont Blanc is especially popular with tourists in Geneva and this spacious boulevard contains many interesting shops specializing in traditional Swiss crafts and chocolate confectionary. Shopping in this part of Geneva also has the added advantage of some pleasant scenery, since it is next to the waterfront and the Quai du Mont Blanc. Take time out, rest your bags and stop at one of the many cafes, before continuing with your shopping. Do bear in mind that if you spend large amount here you may be able to claim the VAT back within 30 days, although the goods must first be stamped by the Swiss customs.
